Dear Jennifer,

Congratulations! This letter certifies that you have met the training and testing requirements to qualify as a certified peer counselor for the Division of Behavioral Health and Recovery (DBHR). Our records show that you have:

1. Completed DBHR's 40-hour certified peer counselor training. This training prepared you to provide peer support services in Washington's public behavioral health system.
2. Received a combined score of 80% or more on the oral and written peer counselor exam.

If you are hired by a community behavioral health agency to provide peer support, you may be asked to seek an affiliated counselor credential from the Department of Health. This is often a requirement of the agency's funding source.

The title of Certified Peer Counselor means that you have successfully completed the Certified Peer Counselor training and passed the exam. This certification does not guarantee employment. Behavioral health agencies hiring certified peer counselors will use their own methods to make sure they choose people who best meet their needs.
